Workers Honor Good Employer

The long record of management-labor harmony in the men's clothing industry was carried forward when the New York locals of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, sponsored a testimonial luncheon at the Brevoort Hotel for Simon Ackerman, a leading clothing manufacturer.

The luncheon, the first of its kind in the union's history, marked Mr. Ackerman's seventieth birthday and the thirty-fifth anniversary of the signing of his first contract with the union. All of the 1,000 Ackerman employees, including retail clothing salesmen and office employees, are members of the Amalgamated.

Speakers at the luncheon noted that the history of peaceful relations between Mr. Ackerman and the union started before the union adopted its present name in 1914. When the first contract went into effect a year earlier, the New York clothing workers were members of the United Garment Workers, AFL.

Three international vice-presidents of the Amalgamated, Louis Hollander and Anthony Froise, co-managers of the New York joint board, and Murray Weinstein, manager of the Cutters Union, Local 4, hailed Mr. Ackerman as a "rugged individualist with a sense of justice and community responsibility."

They all noted that there had been frequent disagreements between the union and the manufacturer but that these had always been adjusted without strikes or lockouts. In behalf of the union, Mr. Hollander presented a plaque praising Mr. Ackerman as a "pioneer merchant, enlightened employer, philanthropist, friend of Israel and lover of humanity."

Responding to the union tributes, Mr. Ackerman recalled that he had been the target of several strikes in the period before he signed his first contract. [illegible] the lions in the industry and the

Iraq Jews Suffer Ruthless Abuse

Two months ago the arrest and subsequent execution of Shafik Ades, wealthy Iraqi Jewish merchant, shocked the world. The charge against Ades was "aid to Israel." He was fined $20,000,000 and sentenced to death.

The hanging of Ades at Basra Square was, however, only one episode out of many — only one instance of the sufferings which are now the common lot of 100,000 Jews living in Iraq, reports a Haganah correspondent, writing from Haifa. Ades' case received worldwide attention because of his wealth and prominence. The American Consul in Bagdad, and later the world press, took up the case. But hundreds of other cases involving the persecution of innocent Jews remain unknown.

Through underground channels, an Iraqi Jew now living in Israel recently received a number of reports on the position of the Jews in Iraq which add up to a grim and terrifying picture.

On May 15, immediately after the Iraqi Army began its "march on Israel," the Iraq government issued a decree "against Zionist activities." Under this decree, any "Zionist activity" is regarded as treason, with punishment ranging from seven months imprisonment to death. Hundreds of Jews have been arrested under this law and sentenced to various terms. The exact number put to death is not known.

There is hardly a Jewish house in Bagdad which has not been searched by police looking for "concealed arms intended for the Zionists in Palestine." There are instances where Jews were sentenced to long terms of imprisonment merely because toy pistols were found in their children's nurseries. In these cases the court's verdict was that the pistols served the purpose of "training."

Rebel On Reich Conductor

A group of world-famous soloists and conductors, including Vladimir Horowitz and Arthur Rubinstein, pianists, Lily Pons, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and André Kostelanetz, conductor, have warned the Chicago Symphony Orchestra that they would not appear as soloists or guest leaders with that ensemble if Wilhelm Furtwaengler became principal conductor.

The board of the Chicago Orchestral Association, as a result, has decided not to have Mr. Furtwaengler conduct there next season, it was learned. Edward Ryerson, president of the association, admitted last month that his organization had invited the German conductor to Chicago. Since then Chicagoans have made no official statement, but Mr. Furtwaengler announced in Vienna that he had accepted the Chicago offer.

The action taken by leading musicians on Mr. Furtwaengler was based on the conductor's war record. They maintained that he had remained in Germany throughout the war and had conducted leading German musical organizations, occasionally in the presence of Adolf Hitler and his top aides.

The protest of American musicians was aimed also at Walter Gieseking, German pianist, who is due to return to America this month after an absence of about ten years. The objections to Mr. Gieseking were generally the same as those to Mr. Furtwaengler, says Howard Taubman, in the New York Times.

Mr. Horowitz has warned local concert managers that he would not appear on any series of recitals that also engages Mr. Gieseking. Mr. Rubinstein has taken similar action. This season he declined an engagement with the National Symphony Orchestra of Washington because it had also engaged Mr. Gieseking as soloists.

Mr. Horowitz said that he made his decision about Mr. Furtwaengler and Mr. Gieseking out of respect for the hundreds of thousands of Americans who died in the war against Nazism. He said that Mr. Furtwaengler's international prestige was such that he could have had a career anywhere outside of Germany and that he had ample opportunity to desert Nazism.

Mr. Horowitz added that he was prepared to forgive the small fry who had no alternative but to remain and work in Germany. Mr. Furtwaengler, however, he said, was out of the country on several occasions and could have elected to keep out.

Mr. Rubinstein sent the following telegram from his home in Beverly Hills, Calif.:

"I will not collaborate, musically or otherwise, with any one who collaborated with Hitler, Goering and Goebbels.

"Had Furtwaengler been firm in his democratic convictions he would have left Germany. Many persons like Thomas Mann departed from that country in protest against the barbarism of the Nazis. Mr. Furtwaengler chose to stay and chose to perform, believing he would be on the side of the victors.

"Walter Gieseking acted similarly.

"There are reports that Furtwaengler saved some persons from the Nazi regime. This is unconfirmed. Now he wants to earn American dollars and American prestige. He does not merit either."

It was learned that a number of leading conductors who had been approached to be guest directors in Chicago next season had declined, if Furtwaengler came. These men refused to have their names used, since they did not wish as conductors to seem to be threatening another conductor, but they did not deny that they had taken such action.

Among other soloists who have taken similar action, it was learned, were Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist, and Nathan Milstein and Isaac Stern, violinists. It appeared that these soloists and conductors made their decisions independently and conveyed them to their respective managers for communication to Chicago.

From sources in Chicago it was learned that Mr. Furtwaengler had been requested to withdraw. He, in turn, maintained, it was said, that he had a binding contract and expected the Chicago Orchestra to pay him off.

There were other indications that Chicago had decided to forego Mr. Furtwaengler's services. When the German conductor announced his engagement some weeks ago, he said it would be for the opening of the season. It was learned that

Judge, Over 70, Recalled To Bench

On January 3, 1921, Isidor Wasservogel assumed his seat as a justice of the New York Supreme Court, having been elected the previous November on the Republican ticket. Three years ago, at the age of seventy, Justice Wasservogel retired from the Appellate Division and resumed private practice.

Last week, Justice Wasservogel was once again on the bench, the first man in New York State's history to be summoned from retirement after reaching the statutory age limit for service.

His new post is as an official referee with power to "hear and determine." Normally a referee hears a case and reports to a justice. The phrase "hear and determine" means that Justice Wasservogel as referee has virtually the same authority to decide cases as a Supreme Court justice.

He was appointed by Presiding Justice David W. Peck, of the Appellate Division, on the strong recommendations of various bar associations to help clear up the Supreme Court's crowded calendar, says the New York Herald Tribune. A new Special Term Part 10 has been created for Justice Wasservogel with a courtroom and chambers in the Criminal Court Building, 100 Centre Street.

At an interview alert and vibrant, Justice Wasservogel began: "It's three years now that I've been off the bench and yet it seems as if I had adjourned court last Friday and resumed today."

Asked why he resumed judicial work, in the process surrendering a $13,000 annual pension and a lucrative practice, Justice Wasservogel explained that the law was more than a career to him, it is his life. He has no hobbies or recreations other than walking. "Therefore," he went on, "it is quite logical that I should be glad for a further opportunity for public service."

[illegible] eventually?" he was asked.

"I don't ever intend to retire," was the answer. "No one can know his fate, but I want to stay in harness until the end."

His advise to young lawyers, he said, and even to older ones, is to prepare cases thoroughly. "No one

Ministers Say Ill 'Have Right To Die'

In a petition proclaiming their belief that a person suffering continual pain from incurable illness "has the right to die," 370 Protestant and Jewish clergymen called on the New York State Legislature to enact a law permitting voluntary euthanasia, or "mercy killings."

The petition, of which copies were sent to all members of the Legislature, urged that the law be amended "to permit voluntary euthanasia for incurable sufferers, when authorized by a Court of Record, upon receipt of a signed and attested petition from the sufferer, and after investigation of the case by a medical committee designated by the court."

The life of the incurable sufferer thus would not be brought to a halt until after he had filed his petition and obtained approval of it by the court and a medical committee.

The Euthanasia Society of America, advocate of legislation to permit euthanasia, reported that Rabbi Sidney Goldstein, of the Free Synagogue, in New York, was a signer of the petition.

Bills urging the legalization of killing of persons who are defective or ailing in one way or another have been offered from year to year in Albany, but their sponsors have been unable in recent years to have them introduced by a member of either the Senate or the Assembly.

In their petition to the legislators, the 370 clergymen declared:

Prodigy, Now 17, To Play Own Concerto

Morrill Kenneth Wolf, child prodigy who was graduated from Yale at the age of fourteen, has become a self-assured young man of seventeen and will make his debut next month as a composer and pianist.

The debut will be with Karl Krueger and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra on February 28 at the Public Music Hall in Cleveland, Ohio, it was announced by Henry H. Reichhold, president of the symphony. Mr. Wolf will be soloist in a piano concerto which he composed a little more than a year ago.

The composer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris A. Wolf, of Cleveland, who are both lawyers. He was graduated from Yale in June, 1945, two months before his fifteenth birthday, and had already attracted attention by such feats as reading a first-grade primer at the age of one and playing Beethoven by ear at two.

At Mr. Reichhold's office, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, Mr. Wolf said that since graduation he had been dividing his time between New York, where he has been studying piano under Arthur Schnabel, and Cleveland his home, where he has been working on his compositions. His concerto was published last year, and brought to the attention of Mr. Kreuger through an agent.

Mr. Wolf seemed surprised at reporters' questions about his age

REBEL ON REICH

Victor de Sabata, Italian conductor, has been engaged for the first four weeks of the season.

Among other conductors who have agreed to conduct in Chicago next season are Rafael Kubelik, Czech; Fritz Reiner and Fritz Busch. Some of these, it is understood, would not have accepted any engagement if Mr. Furtwaengler had been named musical director of the Chicago Orchestra.

Mr. Furtwaengler's record has not been without defenders. Yehudi Menuhin, violinist, appeared as soloist with him in Germany about a year ago. Mr. Menuhin said that the conductor had saved the lives of Jewish musicians during the Nazi regime.

Mr. Furtwaengler, who had been conducting in Europe since the end of the war, was cleared by a German denazification court. It was held at that time that though he had shown bad judgment and was morally culpable he was not legally guilty.

Mr. Gleneking remained in Germany throughout the war. At first he was barred by the Allied military officials from resuming his careers on ground of implication with the Nazis, but later that decision was reversed. He, too, has been playing in public in many European countries.

All news and advertising omitted this week due to lack of space, will be run in next week's issue.

MINISTERS

"We no longer believe that God wills the prolongation of physical torture for the benefit of the soul of the sufferer. For one enduring continual and severe pain from an incurable disease, who is a burden to himself and his family, surely life has no value.

"We believe that such a sufferer has the right to die, and that society should grant this right, showing the same mercy to human beings as to the sub-human animal kingdom. 'Blessed are the merciful'."

MARRIAGES

NATOVITCH-COHEN

The marriage of Ryna Bernice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Osias Cohen, 3717 Henri Julien Street, to Jack Natovitch, son of Mrs. M. Natovitch, 4566 Clark Street, took place at Beth David Synagogue, on December 11, at six o'clock, Rabbi I. B. Rose officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Wearing a floor-length gown of white brocaded taffeta, designed with a drop-shoulder-effect, long sleeves with ruffled cuffs, long bodice, and full skirt, with a slight train, she had a headdress and veil of Chantilly lace, with a scalloped halo, and carried a cascade bouquet of Calla lilies. Miss Sylvia Cohen, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing a peach-shaded taffeta gown, with drop shoulder and full skirt. Her headdress was of blue carnations, and she carried an arm bouquet of the same flowers. Misses Ruth Leibowitch, Harriet Rosenberg, Gloria Gross, and Sureka Wasserman were bridesmaids, wearing white dresses designed with deep, rounded necklines, and full skirts. They had white tulle hats, and corsage bouquets of pink carnations set in bows and streamers of blue taffeta. Myron Cohen, brother of the bride, was best man. For decoration, there were standards of mixed flowers and candelabra. Louis Levitt sang "Because". At dinner at the synagogue, with about two hundred guests, Mrs. Cohen, mother of the bride, received in a blue tissue-faille gown, with a dusty-pink hat, and wrist bouquet of pink roses. Mrs. Natovitch, mother of the groom, wore a black dress, with corsage of red roses. The bride and groom spent their wedding trip in New York, the bride travelling in a brown dress, with beige accessories, and a black broadtail coat, trimmed with brown squirrel. They are living at 5170 Queen Mary Road. Mrs. Rose Cohen, and children, Harvey and Essie, of Toronto, Ont., cousins of the bride, were wedding guests.

NEVARD-GRUNER

The marriage of Rosalind Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Offin Phillip Gruner, 3131 Washington Road, West Palm Beach, Florida, and of New York, to Carlisle Nevard, son of Mrs. Miriam B. Nevard, 4377 Westmount Avenue, Montreal, and of New York, and of the late William B. Nevard, of both cities, took place on Saturday evening, December 25, at the Miami home of the bride's parents, Rabbi Richard E. Singer officiating. The groom is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hallon, of Montreal. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of blue-grey silk surah, with matching hat and shoes, and mauve-pink gloves, and carried a Bible, with white orchids. Mrs. Gruner, mother of the bride, was in rose-shaded lace; and Mrs. Nevard, mother of the groom, in grey lace. The bride and groom are spending their honeymoon in Havana, Cuba, and on their return will live at 98-34 Sixty-Third Drive, Forest Hills, Long Island, N.Y. For travelling, the bride wore a cinnamon-brown gabardine suit, with matching accessories. Author Explains The Jewish Attitude Towards Jesus

Jews could not accept Jesus in his lifetime as a Jewish preacher because he spoke in opposition to established Judaism and they cannot accept him today from the liberal Christian viewpoint for equally strong reasons. The Jewish attitude toward the most controversial figure to issue from Jewish life is outlined by Dr. Beryl D. Cohon, rabbi of Temple Sinai, in a new book, "Judaism in Theory and Practice."

Dr. Cohon agrees that the question "why did the Jews reject Jesus?" is a logical and earnest question from the Christian standpoint and adds that many Jews raise the same question.

Dr. Cohon points out that the word "reject" does not fit. It is not a case that Jesus made a formal bid for acceptance and that Jews rejected his offer. What did happen was that he was not accepted and Dr. Cohon argues that the difference is significant.

The second point that Dr. Cohon makes in answer to the first question is a reminder that Jesus made only a slight impression in his own lifetime. It was centuries later that he became a world-shaking figure.

In his own day he was probably one of a great many nomadic preachers, visiting villages, preaching and going on his way. Some 300 years later he became a towering personality and by this time the Jews had lost contact with Jesus' disciples. Christianity took root in Rome not in Palestine. The obscure Palestine rabbi was transformed into the legend of a mighty church, with a theology, an authority and a way of life hostile to Jews and Judaism. Jews could not accept it and that is one answer to the first question.

Again, Dr. Cohon points out, Jesus ignored the Jewish nation at a time when martyrs in great numbers were perishing for the preservation of the nation. Jesus was not particularly interested in civil life, or the present world and definitely not in the Jewish nation as such.

One of the main drives of the Judaism of that time was to save the tiny nation from sinking into the huge sea of heathen culture and thus save it for the time when the moral teachings of its prophets might be given to a more receptive world.

Again, the claim made for Jesus as the Son of God was simply unthinkable from the Jewish point of view. Judaism rests on the eternal Rock of the One and Only God. On this there could be no compromise. From such a view came the Jewish feeling that any claim to being a son of God was blasphemy.

So much for the history and theology of the Jewish attitude toward Jesus on the issue of acceptance. But why do Jews refuse to accept him today?

From the standpoint of theology, it is as unthinkable now as 2,000 years ago for Jews to compromise the rock of his faith: Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one. Orthodox, reform and conservative Jews alike share in a faith based on ethical monotheism.

But if Jews cannot accept Jesus in the historic Christian interpretation—and still retain spiritual integrity—why cannot they accept him from the liberal Christian standpoint as the supreme human personality? Here there are two things to remember, says Dr. Cohon.

To Christians, Jesus is the symbol of all that is pure of heart, sacred, poetic, lovely, gentle. To Jews, he is the symbol of cruelty, bitterness, persecution, blood and tragedy.

Jews do not hate Jesus. Dr. Cohon says, they fear him. Jesus lives in the mind of the Jew as the symbol of crusaders slaughtering thousands of Jews in his name; of the inquisition—and the torture chambers; of heresy-hunting, expulsions, pogroms, yellow badges, anti-Semitism.

Dr. Cohon says that religious people — Jews and Christians alike — do not appreciate the "enormous fact" that religion is not in the churches but in the lives of the people who accept it. Jews know Jesus not on the basis of what the Gospel writers say, and not on the basis of what great spirits in Christendom have said or are saying today; they know Jesus by the conduct of the Christian community.

Dr. Cohon points out that the traditional Christian version of the Crucifixion is a throbbing agony in Jewish life. It is a poisoned well from which religious anti-Semitism flows in a never-ending stream. The Christian community does not lack for noble men and women in history and in present-day life. But it has been a persecuting community to the Jews and Jesus is its symbol.

Second, to the liberal Christian, Jesus is central to his faith. To the liberal Jew, Jesus is one of a host of teachers and preachers and martyrs of Judaism. He is not the unique teacher; he is one of a great many teachers. Jewish scholars will not withhold recognition from Jesus as a supremely gifted human being who taught mankind many precious truths. But they will not make him the central figure among the prophets of ancient Israel.

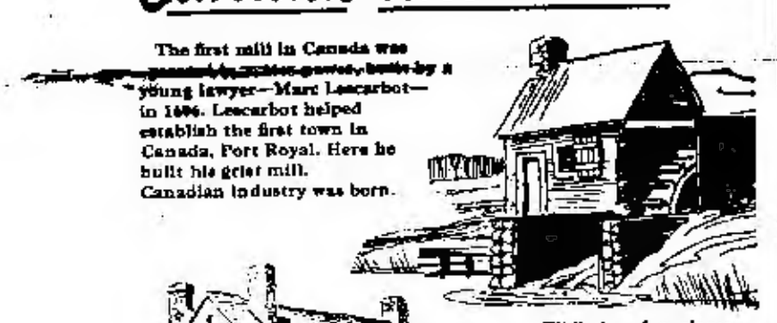
TURNING THE PAGES OF "Canada Unlimited"



The first mill in Canada was [illegible] by a young lawyer—Marc Lescarbot—in 1606. Lescarbot helped establish the first town in Canada, Port Royal. Here he built his grist mill. Canadian industry was born.

While in a few places windmills were used for power, Canada's water resources were so great that by 1734, the country had 52 sawmills and 118 grist mills operating by water power.

The forges and furnaces of early Canada's industry before 1877 were operated by coal. Street lamps in Quebec up to 1849 burned fish oil.

Operation of electric turbines by water power, first started in 1880, opened a great era of industrial progress, and, by 1900, installations were supplying 173,000 horsepower.

Last year hydro power in Canada amounted to more than 10,500,000 horsepower, furnishing energy greater than that of 100 million workers!

The future promises limitless power through atomic energy. And with this will come undreamed of opportunity in our industrial expansion. Yes, there's room to grow in Canada Unlimited.

Third Trip To Newfoundland Jews

By H. M. Caiserman, Of Montreal, General Secretary Of The Canadian Jewish Congress

In 1942, in the midst of the war, it was my privilege to undertake my first visit to Newfoundland. It came about as a result of a $500 remittance from Cornerbrook for the relief work of the Canadian Jewish Congress. No one in the Congress office knew the number of Jews residing in Cornerbrook and for that matter in the entire Newfoundland territory and I was glad to be able to investigate and ascertain the facts.

I flew from Montreal to Moncton and from there to St. John's, Newfoundland, where I had not advised any Jewish person of my arrival. My destination was Cornerbrook for the single reason of the letterhead which advised us of the $500 remittance and this gave me my only contact. So, I wired them announcing my arrival by train. I had actually secured a sleeper on the single track train which crosses over nine hundred miles between St. John's and Cornerbrook in about sixteen hours. It was a real experience. Arriving at my destination, I found half of the entire Jewish community at the station to meet me and install me in the sumptuous Inn of Northcliff Interests.

Today the Cornerbrook community consists of sixteen families. Cornerbrook town is the center of Bowater's Newfoundland pulp and paper mills. It derives its hydro electric power from the Deer Lake generating plant providing 150,000 h.p. Its population in 1942 exceeded 12,000, of whom fourteen families (or seventy people) were Jewish. The town is situated on high ground looking down on the sea and facing a high mountain. The sixteen Jewish families have their stores and residences in the lower part of the city and are very crowded. One wonders why such crowding is ever necessary when so much space is available.

I remember my first meeting of the fourteen families, men, women and children, where my appeal on behalf of our brethren, the victims of Hitlerism in Europe, was answered with additional contributions of $2,000. At the same meeting Arthur Cohen, at present the president of the congregation, submitted a set of plans for the erection of a synagogue. The sum of $14,000 was required and, in making his appeal, he mentioned that the Christian neighbours considered the Jewish merchants godless people because they did not have any house of worship. When I arrived this third time I found the fine synagogue completed with steam heating installed, with a classroom for the seventeen children of the community, with a professional teacher, with a hall for the entertainments of the community.

Most of the Jews here, as elsewhere in Newfoundland, commenced as peddlers to the far-flung and isolated fisher villages and were regarded as real messengers of benefaction. After years of peddling they developed as merchants and established themselves in cities. Each year since, a Congress representative came and the community invariably responded with kindness and substantial contributions. In 1942 the leaders of Cornerbrook community phoned to the St. John's community leaders, advising them of my presence in Newfoundland and convincing them to arrange a meeting for me.

St. John's, which at the time was an unpaved city, is the capital of Newfoundland. It is serviced by two electric companies which supply current from hydro-electric developments and a gas-producing company supplies a limited volume of coal gas for domestic and industrial use. Thirty-five Jewish families resided in 1942 in St. John's which now has grown to forty-six families. The first group of Jews who came to St. John's about sixty-five years ago were Gitelson, Meyers, Miller, and Perlin. An organized congregation was established in 1909 in a store located at 170 Water Street. The first rabbi was Rev. J. L. Plotzki. The synagogue was then moved in 1920 to Prescott Street and finally in 1934 they again moved into a newly constructed building. The rabbi was Rev. I. Dworkin.

Now it is a living institution. A new rabbi from Western Europe is ministering to the religious needs of the community, a kindergarten and Talmud Torah has again been started, for the time being twice a week. The $8,000 budget of the synagogue shows the interest of the small community. In St. John's is the only Jewish cemetery in Newfoundland. During its existence of about twenty years, twenty Jews have been buried there. Besides Cornerbrook and St. John's, two Jewish families reside in Deer Lake; five families in Windsor, Grand Falls; one family in Badger; one in Bishop Falls; six in Bell Island; in all Newfoundland, there are seventy-seven families or about three hundred and eighty-five people. Several Jewish men have intermarried with Christians but have not ceased to serve and to be part of the Jewish community and contribute to all important Jewish causes.

The families are a united group, affiliated with the Canadian Jewish Congress, and are also substantial contributors to the United Zionist Appeal. They confederated with the Canadian Jewish Congress a number of years before the referendum of the Newfoundland people to join Canada.

A number of leading personalities may be named whose public work is responsible for the development mentioned. In Cornerbrook, there is Arthur Cohen, the president of the congregation; Leo and Ernest Kaplow, the three Swirskys, M. Gordon, Samuel Miller, J. Rosenberg. In St. John's, there is the family Wilansky. H. Wilansky is the honourary president of the synagogue; Mrs. Esther Wilansky, the founder of Hadassah, and an active community worker; Morris Wilansky, secretary of the synagogue; S. B. Wilansky, former president. S. B. Shefman is at present president of the congregation. S. Levitz is the oldest Jewish man in the community. H. A. Levitz is the treasurer and four other Levitzes and the active Dr. W. Grobin, chairman of the educational committee of the congregation,

Miss Queene Hershcovich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Hershcovich, 4836 Hutchison Street, Montreal, has been appointed executive secretary of the Montreal Women's Organization of Canada, offices at 5215 Hutchison Street, Montreal —Rice are the most active in the community.

In Bell Island there are the three Cohens, D. Feder, Max Brown, and Ben Glick. In Deer Lake two hospitable families are headed by Sam Schwartz and D. Benikin. In Windsor two fine families are Mr. and Mrs. J. Reef and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cohen; and in Badger the only Jewish family is that of Mr. and Mrs. Plotzki, who have a hospitable home and are warm Jews. I returned from my third visit to Newfoundland with a feeling of joy for the cordial reception and the kind cooperation shown to me as a Jew from this part of the world, bent on a Jewish mission.

A.J.C. Asks U.S. Loan To Israel Now

An immediate loan to Israel by the United States was advocated at Philadelphia, Pa., by the national administrative committee of the American Jewish Congress.

The committee adopted a resolution describing the proposed loan as a method of countering "Britain's blocking of the use of Israeli funds held in England." The British action was assailed as "an act of piracy" and an attempt to exercise "squatter's rights over money which belongs to the people of Israel."

Asserting that the impounded funds represent money invested in Palestine bonds by residents of that country during the British Mandate, the resolution accused Moslems and Christians as well as Jews.

The loan proposal, framed as a request to President Truman, topped decisions at an all-day special national meeting of the Jewish Congress to mark the thirtieth anniversary of its founding convention.

In another resolution, the national administrative committee accused the United Nations Security Council of "abetting aggression" by barring Israel from United Nations membership.

The organization approved a budget submitted by Harold B. Cohen, chairman of its national finance council, calling for a drive to raise $2,000,000 this year to continue the Congress' civil rights-cultural program and to aid the World Jewish Congress in its activities for the protection of Jews abroad.

Most of the Congress' funds, it was explained, were derived from allocations by the United Jewish Appeal in New York and similar Jewish community welfare funds throughout the U. S.

Einstein Undergoes Operation

Prof. Albert Einstein, world-famed physicist and mathematician, underwent an operation at the Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn, New York, and is expected to leave the hospital in about two weeks. The nature of the illness that made necessary surgical treatment for the 69-year-old scientist was not disclosed. An official hospital bulletin reported only that it was "an abdominal condition of long-standing."

This report and statements from the doctors who attended Professor Einstein emphasized that "no malignancy" was involved. The abdominal operation was performed by Dr. Rudolph Nissen, one of the attending surgeons at the Jewish Hospital. The operative procedure took about an hour and the hospital reported Professor Einstein "withstood the operation well."

The scientist, who became an American citizen in 1940 after fleeing persecution in Nazi Germany in 1933, was in the hospital about a week for observation and clinical tests. Three of the doctors who treated the mathematician were educated in Germany, as he was. In addition to Dr. Nissen, they were Dr. Rudolf Ehrmann, a specialist in internal medicine, and Dr. Gustav Bucky, a roentgenologist and a long-time friend of Professor Einstein.

In 1936, Dr. Bucky and Professor Einstein received jointly United States Patent No. 2,068,562 for a device they invented to make picture-taking easier for amateurs. At the time, according to news reports, both scientists seemed a little embarrassed at being "caught" doing anything so simple and practical.

Professor Einstein's fame is in many fields, but he is noted principally for developing a form of abstract mathematical thinking expressed by his theories of relativity and elucidation of the quantum theory.

During the last few years Professor Einstein has been working at the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton, N.J., on a project that has occupied most of his attention for the last thirty years—formulation of a unified field theory that can embrace in one concept the two major forces in the universe, the gravitational field in the microscopic world and the electromagnetic field in the microscopic or subatomic world.

During his physical examination the scientist was reported to be working on this study and contentedly smoking his famous pipe.

Helped British To Escape Nazis

Mrs. Etta Kahn Shiber, who was imprisoned by the Nazis in France for aiding British soldiers to escape and lived to write the best-seller, "Paris Underground," died at her residence, the Hotel Beacon, Broadway and Seventy-fifth Street, New York. She had never fully recovered from a fractured hip, suffered in a fall last summer. Her age was 70.

Born in New York, she was married at an early age to William Noyes Shiber, former wire chief of The New York Evening Journal. She was well known in pre-war days in musical circles as a constant attendant at concerts and the opera.

In 1925, on one of their periodical trips to Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Shiber met Kitty Beaurepos, the English wife of a French wine merchant, who operated a Paris dress shop. They became close friends and Mrs. Shiber visited Mrs. Beaurepos almost annually thereafter, continuing the custom after the death of her husband in 1934.

In June, 1940, during the exodus from Paris, Mrs. Shiber and Mrs. Beaurepos joined the flood of refugees, only to be herded back to Paris by German soldiers who overtook them. On the return journey they found a British aviator who was hiding from the Germans. They concealed him in the luggage compartment of their car, and thus began the work of the Underground.

They found a means of smuggling the flier out of Paris, and from that day on, for five months, continued a similar work of sheltering and smuggling out Allied soldiers. Then the Gestapo caught up with them, and both were arrested and held on semi-starvation rations in the Cherche-Midi Prison. Mrs. Beaurepos was eventually condemned to death and Mrs. Shiber to three years at hard labor.

She languished in Fresnes Prison, suffering tortures from cold, lack of food and other privations. She became very ill and was at the point of death when the United States entered the war and negotiations were begun for the exchange of prisoners. She was finally exchanged for Johanna Hoffman, who had been convicted of carrying on espionage for the Nazis in the U.S.

Returned to New York, she eventually regained her health and began writing the story of her experiences in collaboration with Anne and Paul Dupre. "Paris Underground" was one of the two Book-of-the-Month Club selections for October of that year.

KELNER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Max Kelner, who passed away December 17, 1945, corresponding to the 12 and 13th day of Teveth.

Each day and hour we think of some one,
Who was always so kind and true,
Some one we loved with all our hearts.
Dear one, that some one was you.
You had a kindly smile for all,
Your heart was true and tender;
You toiled so hard for those you loved,
Then left us to remember.
Sadly missed and ever remembered by your loving wife and family.

Joseph, A Pattern Personality

Text: Genesis 45:3 — "And Joseph said unto his brethren: 'I am Joseph; doth my father yet live?'"

In this week's Torah portion we read about one of the noblest of characters of the Bible. In Jewish tradition, Joseph is designated by the name of "Tzadick", the righteous one. Whatever positions he occupied in life whether steward, jailor, or vice-roy, he appeals to us because of the nobility of his soul. He is primarily a person of noble character.

It is difficult to define character. Nevertheless when we think of self-sacrifice, love, loyalty, humility, and kindly acts, all these are qualities associated with a person who is possessed of character. When we think of such virtues as courage, patience, and unselfishness we reflect upon the biographies of the truly great and the truly noble of humanity.

Joseph's life story is as follows in brief. He is sold by his brothers to the Ishmaelites. In turn, these Ishmaelites sell Joseph at the slave market in Egypt where he is bought by Potiphar, one of the officers of King Pharoah's cabinet. Joseph is thrown into prison because of the false charges made by the wicked wife of Potiphar against this fine Jewish youth. In prison Joseph develops the art of interpreting dreams. Because he is helpful to Pharoah's butler and baker while in prison, he comes to the notice of Potiphar who soon appoints Joseph as vice-roy of Egypt.

Famine and hunger forced Joseph's brothers to come to Egypt in order to purchase food. How dramatic is the meeting of Joseph with his brethren! But Joseph does not reveal himself to them. Though twenty years have passed since they sold him in slavery, he wants first to make sure that time has been a factor on the side of the good and that his own brethren have undergone remorse and now regret their merciless act. He therefore designs a method by which to test the growth of their own souls.

As scripture records he brings them back from their journey homeward and charges them with being spies. As they are brought into the palace Joseph listens behind doors as they confess their guilt against Joseph and their own father when they performed the inhuman act of kidnapping their own brother. Joseph then realizes that time has been a helpful healing factor and that now his brothers are worthy of forgiveness. He cries out as he reveals himself unto them, "I am Joseph; doth my father yet live?"

It is significant to observe that forgiveness is not made possible by a mere fiat. It is a matter of give and take. It is a spiritual process. They who wrong another must first repent and confess their guilt and undergo a catharsis of soul before they can be found worthy of being forgiven. Forgiveness is not a simple and easy matter, as some would believe. Joseph only forgave his brethren and became reconciled to them after he was convinced that his brothers were worthy of forgiveness and reconciliation.

One of the most touching of scenes in all of Holy Writ is the hour when Joseph reveals himself. He does not proclaim himself as vice-roy of Egypt. He does not say to his brothers, "You see, my dreams did come true and you mocked me." Far from it. Not a semblance of boasting is to be found in Joseph. In all humility he reminds them that he is their brother and recalls their link of brotherhood by asking, "Doth my father yet live?"

According to the Bible, Pharoah had given Joseph the Egyptian title of the revealer of secrets. No, Joseph does not make use of any title of honour which has come to him in the land of Egypt. He is plain Joseph. He prefers his own Jewish name. His high position in Egypt did not make him haughty. Joseph was not spoiled by success. Indeed, he remained at all times a man of modesty and humility. Is not humbleness the truest of tests of character? Turn the pages of history and study the biographies of the truly great and at all times they reveal the virtues of humility. Was not the virtue of Moses that he was a humble man?

We believe that President Truman of the United States offers the promise of truly becoming one of the great leaders in American history because of his natural humility in all circumstances. He is not spoiled by the fact that he was swept into the office of chief executive against all odds and difficulties. How comforting it is to observe that the chief executive of the United States, in the midst of such a busy hour and busy life, should find time to attend a luncheon in the city of St. Louis in honour of his old buddy, friend and business partner, the Jewish communal worker, Eddie Jacobson. This act of unexpectedly arriving to pay tribute to Eddie Jacobson is just the natural revelation of the true test of character which President Truman possesses.

As we study the life of Joseph, he is known to us not only for his humility but also for the virtue of loyalty. When he asks about his father this is but symbolic of his love for his ancestral heritage. Though in Egypt many years, his loyalty to Judaism and to the Jewish people is never diminished. How tragic for so many in Israel who, when they reach high position, try to escape their Jewish heritage and very often develop a self hate! They try to play the part of amateur gentiles and are never accepted by the non-Jewish world because of their lack of self-reverence and self-respect. Among us we should ever despise the turncoats, the deserters who lack the stamina and the courage to live as Jews amidst all conditions, places, and circumstances. In this regard Joseph is a pattern personality whom we can with profit imitate and follow as an exemplar of loyalty.

IRAQ JEWS

package of first-aid dressings was found in his house.

Many Jews were arrested because they had kept letters received from relatives in Palestine. Every Jew who received a letter from Palestine during May, 1948 was arrested. Many of them are still in prison. "Special treatment" is accorded recipients of letters indicating that one of the family in Palestine was serving with the Israeli Army.

Recently the government started arresting Jews who acquired property in Palestine. Two Bagdad Jews were fined $40,000 each for this reason alone. Bagdad had one Jewish newspaper at the outbreak of the war. The editor and the entire staff are now in a concentration camp.

Also in Bagdad, a Jew was sentenced to three years' imprisonment because he received a letter from his sister in the U.S.A. to which a clipping was attached telling of Truman's announcement recognizing Israel.

In Basra a Jew was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment because a first-aid instruction booklet was found in his house. The booklet was in Arabic. The charge: that he received the booklet from — Russia. At Al-Barch in the outskirts of Bagdad a Jew was lynched after someone spread word that he was distributing poisoned sweets to Iraqi children.

Many concentration camps have been set up throughout Iraq. It is difficult to estimate the number of Jews imprisoned in them. However, one recently published item gives a clue. This item reported that 200 Jews were released after interrogation and that 150 more would be released shortly. Since the charges on which Jews are held are invariably flimsy and unsubstantiated, this group can only represent a number against whom no evidence of any sort could be produced. The conclusion of responsible observers is that innumerable thousands more are being held.

Amalgamated Clothing Workers were once the sheep," he observed. "Now the scale is reversed. The Amalgamated is the lion and we are the sheep. But in the transformation our blood has mingled and we cannot fight any more. We still have misunderstandings, but they are the kind of misunderstandings that occur in the best of families. Coming from an organization of your kind, I regard this as a great honor."

Mr. Ackerman is president of Simon Ackerman Clothes, with factories and stores in New York and Boston. He flew to London to visit an affiliated company there, directed by his son, Myron. Mrs. Ackerman and another son, Raymond, and a son-in-law, Louis Krones, attended the luncheon. Miss Edith Diamond, Mr. Ackerman's private secretary, also was present.

For exercise, he likes swimming and walking. Other sports, as well as dancing, "just don't happen to appeal particularly" to him, he said.

He added that one thing that especially pleases him about the forthcoming concert is that he will be allowed to get a dress suit.

impresses a judge more than a lawyer who is well prepared," he said. Running back in his mind over lawyers he has known, he said present and past generations are much the same, each producing its share of outstanding men. He urged young persons to study law, and said that the keen competition in the profession has always been present.
